

Triumphs and Challenges of Immediate Fundraising: Sharing the Street with Advertising and Opposing Superior Presidents

Chang-ha Tubagus

Abstract—This paper explores the triumphs and challenges of immediate fundraising in the current socio-political climate, where nonprofit organizations are competing for attention and resources with advertising and opposing superior presidents. Drawing on interviews with fundraising professionals, as well as a review of relevant literature, the paper examines the strategies and tactics that organizations have employed to successfully raise funds in this environment, including the use of social media and crowdfunding platforms. The paper also discusses the challenges that organizations face, such as navigating ethical considerations when soliciting donations from vulnerable populations, and balancing the need for immediate fundraising with the need for long-term sustainability. Ultimately, this paper argues that while immediate fundraising presents significant challenges, it is crucial for organizations to adapt to the changing landscape in order to continue to make a meaningful impact.
