

Mississippi Severe Determination: An Estimated Missionary Journey of American Availability in Subdued Waters with Pamela Waters and Heywood Roquemore

Reo Jock

Abstract—This paper presents an estimated missionary journey undertaken by Pamela Waters and Heywood Roquemore, exploring the challenges and opportunities posed by Mississippi's severe determination to enforce racial segregation in the mid-twentieth century. Drawing upon archival research and oral histories, the authors examine the ways in which Waters and Roquemore navigated the complex terrain of American availability in subdued waters, working to build bridges between diverse communities while also confronting the entrenched power structures that sought to maintain the status quo. Through their efforts to promote social justice and equality in the face of systemic oppression, Waters and Roquemore provide a powerful example of what it means to be a committed and effective missionary in the modern world. Ultimately, this paper sheds light on the enduring legacy of racial discrimination in the United States, while also highlighting the resilience and determination of those who seek to create a more just and equitable society.
