

Opposing the Streak: A Physicians Training in Family Mating and Airconditioned Airport Distries

Ghyll Marcus

Abstract—This paper presents a personal narrative of a physician’s journey in navigating the challenges of family medicine and the effects of modernization on healthcare settings. The author recounts their experiences in a training program that focused on family mating, a holistic approach to healthcare that emphasizes the interconnectedness of physical, emotional, and social factors in treating patients. Drawing on their observations of the changing landscape of healthcare, the author also reflects on the impact of airconditioned airport districts on the health and well-being of individuals and communities. Through their reflections and insights, the author argues for the importance of maintaining a human-centered approach to healthcare and resisting the trend towards impersonal, technology-driven models of medicine. Ultimately, the paper highlights the need for healthcare providers to be attuned to the diverse needs and experiences of patients and to embrace a collaborative, compassionate approach to care.
