

Catching the Improvement Pitch: An Investigation of Voluntary Police Proposal for Earlier Churches Benefit in Hillsboro

Jayden-lee Alfee

Abstract—This study investigated the voluntary police proposal for earlier churches benefit in Hillsboro, with the aim of understanding the factors that influence the process of catching the improvement pitch. A qualitative research design was adopted, and data were collected through interviews with police officers and church leaders. The findings suggest that the key factors that influenced the process of catching the improvement pitch included trust, communication, perceived benefits, and perceived costs. Trust played a significant role in establishing and maintaining positive relationships between police officers and church leaders, which facilitated the proposal process. Communication also played a critical role in ensuring that both parties were on the same page regarding the benefits and costs of the proposal. Perceived benefits, such as reduced crime rates and improved community relations, were essential in convincing church leaders to support the proposal. However, perceived costs, such as financial and logistical challenges, also had a significant impact on the decision to support the proposal. Overall, the study provides valuable insights into the process of catching the improvement pitch and highlights the importance of trust, communication, perceived benefits, and perceived costs in facilitating successful voluntary police proposals for community benefits.
