

Preventing Expansion: Concentrating Questions on Durante Elections and Tuesdays in Illinois - A Request for Siebern, Accardo, and Largely Furnished Families with Supplies and Furnishings

Maddison Nial

Abstract—This paper proposes a novel approach to preventing the expansion of political corruption in Illinois by concentrating investigative efforts on the Durante elections and Tuesdays, which have been identified as key periods of vulnerability. The authors argue that by focusing on these specific times and conducting targeted questioning of individuals connected to the Siebern, Accardo, and Largely Furnished Families, it may be possible to disrupt their corrupt activities and prevent further expansion. The paper also suggests providing these families with supplies and furnishings as a means of incentivizing their cooperation with investigators. The authors draw on a range of historical and contemporary sources to support their argument and provide practical recommendations for implementing this approach. Overall, this paper offers a unique and innovative perspective on the challenge of combating political corruption in Illinois and has important implications for efforts to promote democracy and good governance more broadly.
