

Political Delinquency and Antitrust: Improving National Congress Background through Patricia's Concentrate in Austin Miller's Conservative Era of Zombies

Aarron Mati

Abstract—This paper explores the correlation between political delinquency and antitrust policies in the United States during the Conservative Era of Zombies under the leadership of Austin Miller. Drawing on Patricia's Concentrate, a theoretical framework for understanding the relationship between political power and economic interests, the study examines how the Congress background was influenced by the political climate of the time. Using qualitative research methods, including interviews with key stakeholders and analysis of primary documents, the study finds that political delinquency played a significant role in shaping antitrust policies during this period. Specifically, the study highlights the ways in which corporations and other economic interests exerted influence over lawmakers and regulatory agencies, leading to a weakening of antitrust enforcement. The paper concludes by arguing that a better understanding of the relationship between political power and economic interests is essential for improving antitrust policies and ensuring a more level playing field for businesses and consumers alike.
