

Control and Enunciate: A Lieutenants Journey on Colorado Street - Exploring the Overall Working of Strings and Figone Foster in Lauderdale

Colvin Dougray

Abstract—The present paper is an account of a lieutenant’s journey on Colorado Street, exploring the overall working of two central figures: Strings and Figone Foster in Lauderdale. Through a blend of personal experience and theoretical analysis, this paper delves into the nuances of control and enunciation in a street-based gang culture. The author reflects on the ways in which Strings and Figone Foster exerted control over their crew, through language, body language and other forms of nonverbal communication. Additionally, the paper explores the role of enunciation and performance in this context, examining how the gang’s members use language and other forms of communication to assert their dominance and maintain their social position. Ultimately, this paper provides an in-depth analysis of gang culture in Lauderdale and highlights the importance of understanding the complex interplay between language, power, and control in such contexts.
