

Electronic Decision Making: The Role of Chairmen in Couples Therapy in United States - A General Analysis of Thomas and Jacqueline's Case under the Guidance of Evelyn Fulton, LCSW

Sukhvir Titus

Abstract—This paper presents a general analysis of the role of electronic decision making in couples therapy in the United States, with a specific focus on the role of chairmen. The study draws on the case of Thomas and Jacqueline, who underwent couples therapy under the guidance of Evelyn Fulton, a licensed clinical social worker (LCSW). The study utilizes qualitative research methods to analyze the effectiveness of the use of electronic decision-making tools in couples therapy. The results of the study suggest that electronic decision making can be an effective tool for facilitating communication and improving outcomes in couples therapy. Specifically, the role of chairmen is crucial in facilitating the use of electronic decision-making tools, as they help to ensure that both partners are able to fully engage in the process. The study highlights the need for ongoing research into the effectiveness of electronic decision-making tools in couples therapy and provides insights into the potential role of chairmen in facilitating effective communication in this context.
