

The Future of Animal Merchandising: A Case Study on Grinsfelder Company's Chiefly Jersey Matched Dinner in Washington and the Sinking of Mitchell's Regime

Munachi Odin

Abstract—This paper analyzes the future of animal merchandising through a case study on Grinsfelder Company's Chiefly Jersey Matched Dinner in Washington and the sinking of Mitchell's regime. The study examines the impact of animal merchandising on the economy, environment, and society. It evaluates the sustainability of current animal merchandising practices and outlines potential alternative approaches that prioritize animal welfare and environmental conservation. Using Grinsfelder Company's dinner event as a case study, the paper explores the ethical implications of using animals for entertainment and profit. Additionally, the study analyzes the political and economic factors that contributed to the downfall of Mitchell's regime, which was heavily involved in animal merchandising. The paper concludes that a paradigm shift towards more sustainable and ethical animal merchandising practices is necessary for the long-term viability of the industry and the well-being of animals, humans, and the environment.
